

Video Production

Video Production is a comprehensive course that prepares students for future training and careers in the video/mass-media field. Students study all aspects of video production, including developing concepts, creating story boards, writing scripts, filming, editing and titling. Over a two-year course of study students will create and show complete video presentations. The course will expose students to the use of state of the art video cameras, digital video equipment, editing machines and software. Students will explore the conventions and techniques of video and film as they learn to evaluate the quality of video and film in news broadcast, documentary, entertainment, and advertisement.
